

CASE TO REACH JURY SATURDAY

Judge Bailey Makes Statement at Williamson.

ATTORNEYS SUBMIT ARGUMENTS TODAY

Tense Moments Passed by Court and Spectators in Murder Trial Today.

Williamson, W. Va., March 14.—Owing to the long plea of John Marcum, for the prosecution, this afternoon, Judge Robert D. Bailey reconsidered his earlier decision to let the Marcum gun fight case go to the jury tonight. Instead he adjourned court until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, when J. J. Conley, of Wheeling, will close for the defense and Judge Seppa Anders will make the final plea for the prosecution. The case is expected to go to the jury tomorrow afternoon.

Challenge Thwarted.
Mingo County Court-House, Williamson, West Virginia, March 14.—"Falsehood" was the challenge hurled by two lawyers, trembling and white with rage, in the trigger trial today. They came close to blows; the crowd held its breath in the tensest moment yet witnessed during the trial.

John Marcum, pleading for the state, was making a violent attack on the United Mine Workers of America and the sixteen accused miners in particular. He spoke of an alleged demonstration of violence by union members.

Harold W. Houston, whose previous plea for the defense Marcum was assailing with cutting bitterness, jumped to his feet.

"That's not true, and you know it isn't," he shouted.

"All I knew you wouldn't like it," shot back Marcum, advancing toward Houston and pointing his finger at him across the council table.

A deputy sheriff with a gun bulging from each hip stopped close to the two.

Houston shot out his arm and pointing his trigger finger almost in Marcum's face, exclaimed:

"I don't like falsehood anywhere."

"Neither do I," was Marcum's thunderous retort—"and I ask you to say that to me outside. I have too much respect for this court to resent here any statement coming from the lips of such as you."

Judge Robert D. Bailey was bearing his powerful bulk over the bench and with calm but incisive voice asked the two attorneys to abandon their personalities.

He ruled in favor of Houston, asking Marcum to desist from that particular line of argument.

"Smash the Union."

Williamson, West Virginia, March 14.—"Smash the union," was the slogan of Detective Albert Felts and his labor spies when they went to Matewan on the day of the gun battle," shouted Harold W. Houston, in his plea to the jury in the "trigger" trial today.

There was a stir amid the crowd that jammed the court-room. The capital-labor issue which is the dominating factor in the background of the gunfight drama, was the keynote of Houston's address, which was as dramatic as it was eloquent and plainly held the jury's attention from start to finish.

"The money may come direct from Tom Felts, but it comes out of the pockets of the coal operators and it comes in the last analysis, out of the poor pay of the miners who are unable to uphold the law and because they are entitled on the right to organize.

Houston's address referred to Captain F. H. Axtell's arguments yesterday that the union leaders of Mingo county were disloyal. He drove home the point that these miners helped in the war as much as any group of soldiers in America.

Houston dwelt at length on that part of the evidence tending to show that Frank Brewer, former defendant, who turned state's witness, fired the shot that killed Albert Felts, but did so in self-defense.

Houston was followed by John Marcum, of Huntington, West Virginia, who made an impassioned speech in behalf of the prosecution.

His plea was by far the most dramatic and impressive. He is more than seventy, yet his voice rang clear and powerful far beyond the confines of the court-house. People stopped in the streets nearby to listen. He pillorized Sid Hatfield in a mordant, merciless indictment.

It was stirring in its appeal for the right to organize, touching in its plea for the defendants, biting in its trade against the Baldwin-Felts detective agency and bitter in its denunciation of the Coal Operators' association, for which Felts and his fellow detectives made the evictions that led to the battle.

Houston hammered away on the fact that Tom L. Felts, head of the detective agency, is financing the prosecution. He declared the purpose of the concern was to destroy the United Mine workers of America for the coal operators.

"These gentlemen," he said, pointing to the prosecution's table where sat the five attorneys engaged by Mr. Felts, "would make you believe the Baldwin-Felts detective agency is the state of West Virginia."

Strikes a Witness.
Williamson, W. Va., March 14.—A near riot was created just after adjournment of court in the "trigger" trial, this afternoon, when Mrs. Ed. Chambers, wife of one of the sixteen defendants, punched Isaac Brewer in the face as the crowd was pouring out of the court-house.

"You're a dirty dog," shouted Mrs. Chambers, who is a handsome and well-dressed woman and has daily sat close to her husband.

ORDER GIVEN IN STILLMAN CASE

Stillman To Show Court His Financial Status.

ARGUMENTS IN DIVORCE ACTION HELD OVER

Mrs. Stillman Asks $10,000 a Month Alimony and $25,000 for Consul Fees.

New York, March 13.—Another woman of mystery, generally referred to as the "Queen of Diamonds," assumed a place of commanding importance in the sensational Stillman divorce case, today. She is said to have shared the attentive acquaintance of James A. Stillman, multimillionaire president of the National City bank, with Mrs. Florence Leeds, former "Chicken" in the chorus of a New York Roof Garden revue.

One report was that both Mrs. Leeds and "The Queen of Diamonds" met the banker at a private supper party given by another financier of national fame and importance to a party of chorus girls in 1918.

An Order Given.
White Plains, N. Y., March 13.—Supreme Court Justice Moroschnitzer, today, handed down an order directing that, next Wednesday morning, arguments shall be made on the motion of Mrs. James A. Stillman, to require Mr. Stillman to show his financial status and on the motion of $10,000 a month alimony and $25,000 counsel fees.

There can be no further postponement of the arguments unless a delay is agreed to by Mrs. Stillman's attorney. Justice Moroschnitzer directed that Mrs. Stillman's attorney be notified of the date for argument.

The order was handed down at the request of John F. Brennan, of counsel for Mrs. Stillman. Several days ago Mr. Brennan notified Justice Moroschnitzer that an agreement had been made to postpone the arguments indefinitely. It was believed then that the Stillman's might reach a settlement of their troubles outside the court.

It could not be learned, this morning, whether negotiations to settle the case had been in progress and failed.

JEWELRY STOLEN FROM A DISPLAY TRUNK

New York Salesman Is Robbed in Pittsburgh Hotel.

Pittsburgh, March 13.—Jewelry valued at $44,000 was stolen from a display trunk, the property of A. Gerstman, a New York salesman, last night, while he was at dinner in a local hotel. It became known today through police channels. Hotel attaches were unable to throw any light on the robbery when questioned.

Gerstman who represents Battlebaum & Friedman, 15 John street, New York, advances the theory that the thieves must have used a suitcase or traveling bags to carry away the loot from the hotel. The amount being so large that it could not be concealed in a person's pockets. Bellboys, elevator operators and other employees say they saw no one carrying grips or suitcases from the floor where Gerstman's room was located.

TWO YOUNGSTERS IN A COLUMBUS COURT

One, Brazen and Defiant, Advises Pal To "Shut Up."

Columbus, March 13.—Crime produces strange bedfellows. Jimmy, nine, sobbing, standing in terror, apparently, at the sight of the blue-coated arm of the law, pleaded that he not be sent to jail.

Jack, ten, brazen, bubbling over with self-confidence, and, seemingly, without fear of consequences, ordered his little pal-in-crime to "shut up," declaring the officers had "nuttin" on us."

This contrast in types of youthful humanity marked a conference held by Detective McNeal with the youngsters who are accused of breaking into a local hot factory and stealing stamps and lead pencils among other things.

The boys were taken to juvenile court.

CHURCH SOCIETIES

Trinity Baptist Revival.
"Judgment is already passed on the unsaved man and the eyes of God recognize no difference one from another," declared Rev. George M. Landis, evangelist, in his sermon on "No Difference" at Trinity Baptist church last night.

The text was taken from Romans 3:23. Dr. Landis said in part: "The fact that all have sinned places them on a common plane. Whether the sins be many or few does not alter the fact of their guilt. To the man in the sky-scraping, no difference is discerned in elevation between the man on the street and the man on the sidewalk. So in the eyes of God all sinners are on a common plane."

"There is no difference in the fact that all sinners are guilty. 'One sin constitutes man a sinner and a rebel in his universe.' Here it is a case of guilty or innocent."

"All guilty sinners are condemned. The fact is illustrated by the various judgments recorded in the Bible, in which all were punished together. Adam and Eve were destroyed together. The victims of the great flood, the citizens of Sodom, and the first born in Egypt on the night of Indianapolis, Ind., March 13.—Attempts to reduce wages of coal miners throughout the country will be resisted by the United Mine Workers of America with all the force the organization has at its command.

John L. Lewis, international president declared, in a statement made public today.

The statement was made in connection with the action of the international executive board, now in session here, with regard to the situation in the state of Washington. Operators there have closed down mines because miners refused to accept a reduction in wages to the level of October 31, 1919.

Officials of the international union have taken the position that this action by the Washington operators was a violation of their agreement with the mine workers, which is in effect until March 31, 1922.

AMERICANISM IS THEME OF DR. ARTHUR W. EVANS

Who Lectures in Marion Last Night—Welsh Orator.

"What America Means to Me," a lecture by Dr. Arthur W. Evans, the fiery Welsh orator, was one of the best numbers on this season's entertainment course being given under the auspices of the senior class of the Harding High school. Dr. Evans' lecture was full of true, thorough-going Americanism and was by no means lacking in an abundance of keen wit. He told his audience in plain, trenchant and fearless terms what is wrong with us here in the United States and then reversed his theme and told us what is right and why he became an American citizen and it is assured that his audience went home proud that they were American citizens.

One more number remains on the senior lecture course, a lecture by Mr. Lincoln McConnell, LL.D., which, it is said, will probably be the best number on the entire course and the seniors consider themselves fortunate to secure this number for the closing entertainment.

Dr. Evans talked before the entire school this morning and gave a splendid lesson which was full of rare humor which put "the spice of life" so to speak, in his address, which went straight home to the hearts of the students. The students stood and gave him a rousing cheer after he had finished.

SEPARATE PACT IS CONSIDERED

America May Treat with Germany and Austria.

SENATE COMMITTEE DISCUSSING MATTER

Separate Treaty Is Considered Practical and Advisable by Numerous Officials.

Washington, March 13.—The possibility of the United States entering into separate negotiations with Germany and Austria is being given serious consideration by Republican members of the senate foreign relations committee. It was learned today.

Some leaders have expressed the belief that the administration may decide that a separate peace treaty with Germany and Austria would be a better and more practical way of ending the still existing technical state of war between the United States and those nations than the more passage of a congressional resolution.

Several Republican leaders of the senate said they are in accord with the reported view of the president and the state department that the repassage of the Knox peace resolution at this time would be "im opportune" if only because of the German reparations situation.

Other Republican senators were strongly favor reestablishing the United States upon a peace basis without further delay expressed the opinion, however, that one reason for the movement of British, French and Belgian troops further into Germany as a result of the reparations controversy may have been to create a situation that would prevent this country from now making peace with the German people and at the same time focus attention again on the league of nations issue.

GERMAN OFFICIALS OPTIMISTIC TODAY

Believe Germany Will Win in Plebiscite Sunday.

Berlin, March 18.—German officials and the German press make optimistic predictions today, that Germany will be victorious in the plebiscite next Sunday, which will determine the future status of Upper Silesia. ENJOYABLE MUSICAL GIVEN LAST EVENING

By Whatsoever Circle, at First Presbyterian Church.

A very enjoyable musical was given at the First Presbyterian church, Thursday evening, under the auspices of the third division of the Whatsoever circle, King's Daughters. The program was opened with an organ prelude by Mrs. Harry Williams. A two-piano duet was contributed by Mrs. J. C. Woods and Mrs. H. K. Mouser and this was followed by a trio with Miss Gertrude Zuck at the violin, Mrs. H. K. Mouser at the piano and Mrs. Harry Williams at the organ. Mrs. H. J. Brouwer sang a group of songs and Miss Lena Phillips rendered two harp selections. After another two-piano duet by Mrs. Woods and Mrs. Mouser, Mrs. W. B. Long sang a sacred selection with violin, organ and piano accompaniment.

IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED BY TWO MARION BANKS

Marion County and City Banks To Spend Thousands.

CAMPBELL BLOCK IS TO BE REMODELED

County Bank To Take Over Barber Shop, Which Will Be in the Basement.

Plans are under way for a major remodeling of the building occupied by the National City Bank & Trust company and additions to provide more than twice as much floor space for the banking rooms of that institution located in the Campbell block. It is estimated that these changes will cost more than $50,000. Work is expected to start shortly after April 1. When completed the building will have the appearance of an entirely new structure, and the institution will have a modern, up-to-date and roomy banking house.

At present the bank occupies 1,250 square feet of floor space and the additions will increase this to 3,744 square feet, more than twice as much as the bank now has. Both the rooms occupied by the Hughes clothing store, the one on the north and the one on the west, and the present stairway leading from the main street to the second floor of the building, will be taken over by the bank. A new roof is to be constructed and the entire exterior of the structure will be of pressed brick and Bedford stone.

Main Entry On Center. The main entrance to the bank will be on Center street, with a smaller entrance on Main street, where the stairway is now located. There will be an entrance to the basement on Center street and the stairway to the second floor will be on Main street on the north side of the Hughes clothing store room.

The lobby of the banking room will be twenty-four by forty-eight feet and the working space for banking purposes will be approximately twenty-four by thirty-three feet, with space for seven tellers' cages. There are to be offices for the president and cashier, private offices, two consultation rooms, directors' rooms and ample booth accommodations.

New vaults also will be constructed, one a safety deposit vault with a capacity of 2,400 boxes and the other to replace the present private vault of the bank. There will be a separate entrance for each vault.

In Oak Throughout. The banking room will be furnished in oak throughout, with beam ceilings, tile floor in the lobby and either rubber tile or cork floors in the offices and the working space. The furniture and fixtures will also be in oak.

On the second floor there will be nine suites of modern offices, including a suite of six rooms for the law firm of Crissinger, Guthrie & Strahlitz. The stairway will be of pressed steel construction and the entire second floor will be finished in hardwood and have all modern improvements.

Under the northeast corner of the building, in the basement, the steam heating plant will be located and the remainder of the basement space will be fitted up suitable for a restaurant or grocery, with an additional room on the west end, suitable for a restaurant kitchen or barber shop. The basement is to be finished with tile walls, cement floors and will receive light through prism glass on the sidewalks.

It is expected that the contract for the work will be let by April 1 and the work will begin as soon after that date as possible. J. Lewis Ellis is the architect.

Marion County Bank. Work on the remodeling of the room in the rear of the Marion County bank, in order to add that space to the present banking establishment, is expected to be started shortly after April 1. The improvements will cost approximately $20,000.

The floor of the bank will be built back to the west line of the room now occupied by the Hughes shop, adding a space of twenty-two by thirteen feet. A new safety deposit vault, with double doors, seven and one-half by twenty feet, will be constructed for a five dollar box. The basement is to be refitted for a modern barber shop.

On Second Floor. On the second floor will be a bank directors' room, with an office, a stairway leading from the first floor banking rooms. The third floor will be made into an extension of the Knights of Pythias clubrooms, with a new stairway leading from the clubrooms to the lounge rooms and a new fire exit from the lounge room to the street.

The exterior of the building will be the same as that of the present bank building, using limestone facing. The interior of the banking rooms will be remodeled to increase the size of the lobby and add to the space now used by the tellers. J. Lewis Ellis is the architect for the remodeling. It is expected that the contract will be let within a short time.

A license to marry has been issued to Lauren Wesley Hudson, Marion, and Miss Myram C. Thompson, Warrenton.

Into the Mysterious Hill Country of Borneo an English Soldier Pits His Wits and Matches His Courage Against Headhunters With a White Baby's Life as the Stake

David therefore departed thence and escaped to the cave of Adullam—2 Samuel, xiii, 1.

UNCHARTED and largely unexplored, the interior hill country of Borneo is a realm of fascinating mystery, of strange and unfavorable customs, a weird and play-ground, leafless in the beauty of its intermingling flowers and ferns and mosses.

The granite cliffs and the barren limestone hillsides are dotted with numberless caves, some shallow, some of considerable size, others deep and dark, some with chambers, others with a single opening. In the caves, the natives have built their huts, and in the caves, the natives have built their huts, and in the caves, the natives have built their huts.

Into this back country the constabulary under Captain Boyd was ordered in a reluctant, but not to leave Adullam and his tribesmen, who, following their attack upon Resan, were returning to their mountain fastnesses.

This attack had been sudden and wholly unexpected. Without a whisper of warning two war canoes, each containing fully 100 warriors, had shot out of the Labuk across the bay and had beached just below the town. Occupied about their customary vocations, the townspeople were thus virtually at the mercy of the savages, who, oddly enough, did not employ their usual tactics. Those who rushed indoors and barricaded their houses and shops were unharmed; only those who failed to find shelter were killed as, hurriedly making their way through the native quarter of the town, the head hunters invaded the section reserved for Europeans. In the gardens surrounding the home of Horace O. Mann, the local representative of a London company, first, they had surprised one of the Europeans who was acting as nurse for Horace's son, the eighteen-month-old baby. Mrs. Mann and her maid, and the girl, they had snatched up the child and fled from the grounds. Without further molesting the villagers, the hunters had returned to the waterfront and set off in the lone canoes immediately, carrying with them such heads as they had secured, together with the lustily crying infant.

With the departure of the pillagers, word of the raid was passed both by land and water to Sarawak. Major Hamilton, being advised of the tragedy, directed Captain Boyd to proceed at once to the scene with the entire force of the constabulary, and the utmost haste was made to reach the spot. The natives, however, were not to be so easily deceived. They had seen the constabulary, and they had seen the constabulary, and they had seen the constabulary.

I exacted a generous toll from the first to reach the level of the altar.

money not easily erased from one's memory. I could easily have believed that time had been turned backward 1000 years in its flight. The huge clearing, walled in by a sweep of primeval forest, formed a natural amphitheater, in which were gathered a vast company of dark-skinned natives—the fearful Babel Tengg tribe. Seated in a white man behind such a scene of savage splendor, primitive pomp and power.

SEATED on a bamboo litter, cushioned with luxurious skins, as became the dignity of his office, and clothed in full war regalia, old Chief Tama Lishan was every inch a king. His headpiece, bristled with heron's feathers, which only those who have captured a human head may wear. His war coat of goat skin was elaborately decorated with bead work and feathers. Across his knees lay a heavy black sword and by his side rested his shield, the latter faced with patches of color alternating with tufts of human hair, while from its center bore the drawn, shaven face of a former foe. Behind the litter stood a group of powerful attendants bearing spears and bows. At his feet crouched two half-crown leopards, whose silken fur glistened in the sunlight. These he had captured as rats, and in his own brutal way he had taught them to recognize him as master. They were now leashed by long thongs carelessly held in the king's left hand.

Among about the chief in crescent form, with Tama Lishan at the center, were the principal warriors of the tribe, clothed as their prowess of battle justified, with feathered headbands and leather "coats of mail," tall shields and vicious spears.

In the hollow of the crescent, between the widespread horns, rose an immense natural altar of solid granite, projecting as a foot to the cliff over which we were leaning. A flight of broad steps led from this to the lower level. At the right of the altar, a bowl-shaped fount carved in solid rock, gloved the coils of an intense fire, beside which stood ten native slaves chained together in pairs.

"These," explained the guide, "are the Keepers of the Fire. They are chosen from the daughters of the chiefs to be the sacred duty of keeping this fire, which was first snatched from the center of the earth by their sovereign deity and presented to their priests, burning always, for should it ever cease to burn the strength of the Babel Tengg will depart forever. So long as they serve the virgins live in the cave opening on the altar."

"When they cease to serve, what then?" I asked.

"They are sacrificed to insure a successful hunt or to please the spirits before the tribe goes into battle." (Not an altogether credible statement, I thought.)

Next the fire sat a number of large Chinese earthenware jars—the most prized possession of a Babel Tengg, since one's wealth was largely calculated by his collection of jars. These, I was told, were filled with a powerful native liquor to be consumed in the prolonged feasts which would terminate the ceremony. A large white man, wearing a hand-wrought iron collar, representing a series of human heads. To this collar was bound the tiny son of Horace Mann. Robbed of his clothing, he was waving his arms in happy contentment, unconscious of the ordeal which awaited him.

The priest, upon whom all eyes were centered, was pacing to and fro, jerking himself and his headdress into a frenzy of emotion by a series of jerky motions, recounting the adventures of his traditional ancestors and on occasion alluding to Tama Lishan as the peer of all chiefs. Swayed by his eloquence, the mighty throng repeatedly answered back with a reverberating roar of approval.

Seeing suddenly from his baroque, the priest motioned to an attendant, who ran to his side carrying a bar of iron perhaps an inch in diameter and three feet in length. Dropping upon both knees the priest presented this to the priest, who accepted it with equal formality.

Our guide clutched my arm. "No one but a Babel Tengg has ever been permitted to see this before," he whispered. "When this iron is heated while the priest will destroy adverse spirits lurking in the child's body, then the sacrifice will be made, the head will be given to the king and the drinking will begin."

"How are the adverse spirits to be destroyed?" I inquired, watching intently the action below.

"By thrusting the iron entirely through the abdomen," was the answer.

"WE ARE not here to be entertained," I said, drawing back from the edge of the platform. "We must do something to stop this."

"There is nothing to be done, sir," my men assured me. "We could not reach the platform before the sacrifice would be over, and even were we able to do this we would only be contributing our heads to Tama Lishan's collection."

"You may be correct," I admitted, saying nothing of my intentions born of the moment. "But we will not stand idly by while a British subject is being murdered. Captain Boyd must be notified immediately of this locality. You will therefore return with all possible speed to camp with this information. In the meantime I will remain here to handle any conditions which may develop."

Glad to be relieved of a possible encounter with the shouting mob below, my companions quickly prepared to obey. We were not to be deceived, for the guide offered no objections when I requested him to leave two of his stoutest spears with me. Once my companions were gone, another look informed me that the iron had been placed in the bed of coals which were being fanned with a rude blow by the attendant.

Ignoring all else for the moment, I spread my blanket on the ground, drawing the spears over this in the form of an X, reaching from corner to corner and, shivering the fabric in each of the corners, I drew these ends firmly about the spears, making a huge shieldlike affair. Threading this through the foliage, I reached my former point just in time to see the attendant transfer the superfluous iron to the hands of the priest. He, in turn, with unfeeling grimaces, forced toward the helpless babe preparatory to carrying into execution the ritual of which the guide had spoken. However, he did not reach the child.

WITH the first glance I had drawn a pistol from my holster, and as the southern priest accepted the smoking bar from his servant I waited only to aim deliberately before firing.

In the instant required for this action I guessed the spears at their point of intersection and leaped from the cliff, trusting my improvised parachute to break the fall. This it did and I landed safely a few feet from the night spot. Discarding the parachute, I drew my own knife and turned toward the post. An attendant, crouching in my path, offered half-hearted resistance, but the knife removed him as a further factor.

I had the baby in my arms, my knife returned to its sheath, and as the southern priest again in hand before a semblance of order had been restored and the natives began to make the trail of affairs. When the truth did dawn on them there was again a momentary hesitation owing to their unaccustomed tribal traditions as to the dire disaster attendant on the profanation of a spirit hallowed ground even in the pursuit of an enemy. In this moment I sighted from the corner of my eye the large cave opening on the altar and intuitively knew that my only possible protection lay there.

As the overwhelming host closed in my position became untenable owing to the fact that it afforded no adequate protection. Hurriedly casting about, I saw that in the interior of the cave, which was fitted as living quarters, one corner extended further into the mountain. Hidden in this dark passage, I could see no light from the outside and the light.

By what would prove a special act of providence I reached the black hole unharmed by the spears rattling to the floor around me. The infant was thoroughly frightened by the noise and confusion and clung to me, striking with both arms about my neck, but was still unharmed.

With the crying child I pushed further into the gravelly depths, shortly encountering a field of stalactites, whose jagged points caused me no slight discomfort. Flashed by the certainty of death approaching from behind, I crawled low and crouching on as rapidly as my surroundings permitted. Suddenly a gleam of light reflected on the ceiling above me as a torch was lit. From somewhere the Babel Tengg had produced torches, whose brilliant and yellow flames were lighting the hidden cavern. After a deep stare

I came upon a large stream of water flowing at right angles across the cave and abruptly terminating the passage. I was at the end of the road.

Placing the whimpering youngster between my feet, I prepared for the inevitable. Water and water came the dawning torches. A dark figure was silhouetted against the cave when I fired. The reverberations of the shot were lost in a groaning rumble, accompanied by a gentle swishing and a dull thump as of a heavy body striking the earth. A fine dust fell upon us, the red glare of the torches disappeared and all was strangely silent. The full significance of this did not occur me immediately, but with the passing of the seconds in the unbroken and oppressive stillness the truth forced itself upon me. The bullet had struck a partially leoparded creature and had forced it from its lair, starting in motion a mass of rock which closed the passage for fifty feet or more. Young Horace O. Mann, Jr., and I were trapped alive.

The only possible hope for salvation lay in the stream running at our feet. We were so close to the surface of the mountain that it seemed more than likely that this stream must find an exit to one of the countless fissures. By following this we might find such an outlet. In all events, this was the deciding point—it was our only chance.

The water was waist deep. Traveling with the flow of the current and holding my charge well above the reach of the splashing water, I entered the vaulted tunnel and slowly waded down its course. The at that instant opened fire it is difficult to judge just what the effect might have been.

THE crawling of the underbrush and dead branches and the breaking of twigs were more noticeable. The men, however, were making no attempt to conceal their whereabouts or movements. Three, four, five seconds passed. Then the foliage parted, disclosing the head of a giant boa constrictor.

Fortunately for us, we were to the left of this monster of the underworld, who, seeing his prey in the wind, glided swiftly toward the prostrate wanderer. The play of his great muscles hypnotized me. Only the sense of my unfulfilled obligation to the helpless child in my arms could have caused me to desert in the face of the impending struggle. Knowing, however, that this intention could be much better employed in flight, I charged myself away from the alluring prospect.

I worked eastward, with the thought of entering the loop up of climbing toward the coast. For the time I was undisturbed by further interception. In a short time I was down the valley I ran up in a small bed of island ponds, such as are found in the Tenggah district, and without difficulty pressed one into service as a saddle horse. Traveling was thus simplified by a well-known trick.

The same foisted little animal carried us at an easy trot along the obscure trails and brought us presently before an abandoned village. An interior village usually consists of one long house, elevated above the ground fifteen or twenty feet on supporting poles, and fronted by a wide porch running the full length of the dwelling, from which doors lead to the several family apartments and in which one or more ladder reach from the ground. On this porch is built the fireplace and from the beams are suspended the rep-tured heads. There also are kept the Chinese jars so highly prized.

"Where," I demanded of myself, "could be a more ideal spot to spend the night? The villagers are sensibly all sleeping in the drunken orgy started this morning and will not build drinking for two or three days. Tomorrow we will be better able to travel."

Trusting to the foot of the single ladder in the porch, I reached the porch and took possession of the house. Here we found food in plenty and had soon satisfied our hunger and prepared to spend an enjoyable night. These preparations were not to fail of realization. In fact, I had scarcely resigned myself to a contemplation of the natural beauty of the surrounding hills when a faint hum of discordant voices placed me again on the alert. The tones grew in volume. The villagers were returning. Babel Tengg is a man caught in a trap of his own making.

My small protégé was crouching on a scrap of sugar cane, happy as a prince. Babel Tengg, this other unknown was conspicuous. What did it matter, after all, so long as we played the game to the end? Picking the little tot up, I held him lovingly in my arms, kissed his dimpled cheek and then dropped him, sugar cane and all, beside one of the large earthenware jars.

ALTHOUGH armed against unprovoked attacks, I could not kill from ambush, as taking careful aim I knocked the spear carrier by the old chief fairly from his head. His answering roar of rage was awful to hear. Contrary to all expectations, instead of running for cover, Tama Lishan snatched his sword from his back and, shrieking his orders to his followers, bounded toward the ladder. His courage and magnificent My second shot struck him in the shoulder, but only resulted in pushing him backward for an instant. As he plucked his foot, the hammer rang again and the trigger. The hammer fell with a harmless thump. The cartridge did not fire.

The air vibrated with savage cries and angry calls. With such sudden and unannounced fury did the attack fall it seemed as though the very wrath of the gods had been unleashed.

Up the ladder Tama Lishan sprang, a dozen others crowding close upon his head. I could take no others—should this infuriated mania upon the ladder the future would indeed be problematical. Rising to my knees I leveled both pistols at his breast. But it was not meant that I should fire the fatal shot.

The rear door of a huge room above the noisy tunnel. The landing of a rifle volley, accompanied by the whistle of the bullet, startled all parties on the ladder. The village yard quickly filled with the white-bearded, white-clothed constabulary. Two natives fled in every direction, leaving old Tama Lishan alone. Never so hotly pursued as now. Turning to meet his new foe, his foot slipped and he fell headlong, plumed by a rain of bolts from the second volley.

Captain Boyd hurried directly to the porch, accompanied by Mr. Mann. Seeing the position the frantic father dared not ask. I gestured to the Chinese jar.

"Put my moment in the pot," I said.

Looking in, we saw him cautiously slipping his spear cane.

Charge.JURORS REQUIRE
BUT LITTLE TIMEOnly Thirty-Seven Minutes to Deliberation—Scenes When Verdict Is Read.

Marion, Okla., March 18.—Clara Smith Hamon is a free woman. The jury after being out 37 minutes returned a verdict of "not guilty." She was charged with the murder of Jake L. Hamon, millionaire and ex-National committee man from Oklahoma.

Scarred and white-faced, the defendant made her way across the courtroom and pressed the hands of those who had just freed her of the murder charge. She was passed from one to another of the women and men who have sat through seven days of trial. They put their arms around her and kissed her.

In the close of his argument Attorney General S. Francis Freeling, specially appointed by the governor of Oklahoma, said: "Nobody wants a great penalty for her. We agree with anybody on earth that she has been wronged."

In the courtroom was the widow, Mrs. George A. Perkins Hamon, with her 15-year-old son, Jake L. Jr. No link passed between her and the accused girl. For the first time since the opening of the case they seemed to have dropped out of each other's lives. And when the jury filed toward the stairway leading to the chamber under the courthouse dome, Mrs. Hamon and her boy went away. She had said that she had forgiven Clara.

After the verdict Clara Smith Hamon said: "I am going to do something toward helping other girls. There are others who need help, just as I needed it. Some time, some place, I am going to find them and tell them my story, which may be their story if they are not warned in time. It is too soon to make plans. I don't know how I will do it. If I can give such help it will sort of pay my debt to life."

Back on Paying Bonuses.
Cairo, Tex., March 18.—The dispute between the Cisco chamber of commerce and the Cincinnati Reds over the $750 bonus offered for the selection of Cisco for spring training has been referred for settlement to Gary Hermann, owner of the Reds. Cisco objects to paying the full amount on the ground that Cincinnati failed to bring as many men as promised and that many of the stars are missing.

Atlanta, Ga., March 18.—Plans of Socialists to picket the white house on April 13 and 14 in behalf of Eugene V. Debs have been abandoned. It was announced here by Samuel M. O'DOWD LOSES IN
as Champion.

It was a crude sort of fight. Wilson, the Italian, fought mainly for O'Dowd's body. Often he seemed to be hitting very low. Time and again O'Dowd cringed and whimpered in pain as the brown glove of the Italian thumped against his waist line.

O'Dowd was a sight at the finish. In the thirteenth round his forehead was ripped open, either by the laces on Wilson's glove or from falling against the ropes. He could scarcely see. The blood kept spurting during the fourteenth and fifteenth rounds. Both men seemed strong enough at the finish. Both were slinging their spangly gloves about furiously.

MIRIAM BOSLOGUE

Art Over $50,000 a Year.

Miriam Boslogue

Miss Miriam Boslogue was born in Indiana and received her early education in New England. She took up dressmaking as a means of earning a living and declares her first "creations" were heartbreaking failures. Later she took up sculpture which she found of great importance in the art of designing clothes. Putting her knowledge of sculpture into dressmaking, Miss Boslogue succeeded in her chosen field and is one of the foremost designers of gowns in the world, earning more than $50,000 a year.

NO ROOM FOR MORE
HOLDERS OF OFFICEWords of President in Address to Federal Workers.

Washington, March 18.—There is no place in the federal service for the mere officeholder. President Harding told the executive committee of the National Federation of Federal Employees, which he received at the White house. The president urged increased efficiency and interest in duty on the part of government employees, adding that in this way government workers would best obtain increases in salaries.

Mr. Harding also told his visitors that he and the members of his cabinet gladly would cooperate with federal employees in working out their problems.

Through Luther U. Steward, president of the federation, the committee presented a statement to the president outlining what it regards as the essential means to the achievement of improved employment conditions and greater efficiency in the government service. These include reclassification and reorganization of the civil service and the establishment of a national budget system.

Senate Hears Mrs. Foraker.
Columbus, March 18.—Mrs. Joseph B. Foraker, widow of the late Senator Foraker, addressed members of the Ohio senate at their session. She explained the purposes and scope of the campaign to raise funds in Ohio as well as throughout the United States for erecting a soldier's victory memorial building at Washington, and of which she is the head in this state. Contributions of private individuals are being sought in addition to the subscription provided for by a resolution of the Ohio general assembly.

New York, March 18.—Tentative plans for taking Bruno Caruso, noted singer, who is convalescing from a severe attack of pneumonia to Italy, probably the first work in March, were announced. His condition has improved so perceptibly during the last few days, it was said, that his physicians have decided to discontinue the use of a daily building.

Holding A Husband

BY ADELE GARRISON.

I took Lillian's cue quickly. She bring each place back as soon as we had given me the opportunity for get it behind. And—well, probably which I had wished, in asking me to wait, and so much as we will abruptly when my master machine if all but of us are working together.

"Oh!" I said contently. "I forgot." And I won't have to clean my to have Jim bring it over. But it's in good condition, for I looked it over this morning."

This last statement was the truth, for I had carefully inspected the machine.

"What's the use of bringing it over?" Lillian asked nonchalantly. "The only thing I'm good for is running a machine, anyway, while Madge is the white-haired fairy when it comes to hemming. Why can't we divide the work, and Madge and I take part of it over there? We'll run a regular messenger service, and

"Why not let them take these?" Both Madge and I came to the rescue quietly and capably. She indicated a pile of stuff on the bed which had been filled on the windows. "I guess that will be all right," Mrs. Durkee acquiesced, and in another minute or two we were on our way across the lawn.

"Lucky that machine is in your room," Lillian commented, as we climbed the stairs after an explanatory word to Katie.

She did not speak again until I had unlocked my room door and fastened it after our entrance. Laying the stuff on the bed she went directly to the machine, and with a swift, capable, preliminary inspection began to wind a bobbin from a spool of rose-colored silk.

"If you'll look over those things on the bed and tell me what to do first," she said, "I can get some of this out of the way. And now as to the trunk—do you care if I put the things back into it as I go through them? I can't pack them the way you did, but at least I can get them out of the way so you can lock the trunk."

"I shall be so glad to have you do that," I answered, and I could not keep my voice from trembling, though I made a desperate effort to control it.

"I can not tell you just how I feel about handling those things. It is almost as if my mother—had—just—died. I—I haven't the strength—yet—to touch them."

"I know," Lillian breathed softly, then as briskly as if the trunk despoiled of mementoes of my mother and my own never had been mentioned, she said: "Is this the way to thread this thing? I thought I knew how, but I'm not quite sure."

The subterfuge was a more palatable one than Lillian usually employs, but it served its purpose, and by the time I had finished the farce of explaining the threading mechanism to one who knew all about it I had regained my self-control, and began to turn home.

Lillian rose mementoes which she was now going to search.

And only after she had carefully arranged my chair and had ensconced me in it, did I realize that her kindness in such wise that my back was to the heap of my despoiled from the machine as she finished the last stitch, came over to me, smiling triumphantly.

"Anything wrong with this stitching?"

"Not a thing!" I agreed promptly. "And I shall be able to get along beautifully now."

"I'll get at the trunk, pronto," she said. "It won't take long, and then I'll be able to help you with the last of them. You're in a bad light. Come over to this window."

lengths of cloth she was to stitch. "Just haste them from this pin to this one," I directed.

She looked up at me quizzically. "I know I'm going to frighten you out of seven years' growth," she said, "but I can't help it. I never hate anything that is to go on a machine."

I repressed the protest which rose to my lips. I am a good needlewoman, though a fussy one, but I had seen Lillian in action many times, knew her cool judgment, and that she would not jeopardize the rose-colored fittings of Lella's room.

For the next few minutes the sewing machine whirled steadily while I pinned strips of cloth together, and when that task was accomplished I began to turn home.

Lillian rose mementoes which she was now going to search.

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it when you clean it entirely. To do this just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will at once cease, and your hair will be shiny, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

The "Easy" Pays For Itself

The "EASY" Vacuum Electric Washing Machine will pay for itself out of what it saves and then pay you a profit of $10 to $15 a month besides.

That is the experience of thousands of housewives who have tried the "EASY" and found that it does their washing satisfactorily.

They know that the "EASY," by air pressure and suction, most nearly duplicates the work of human hands, but almost without effort on their part.

The hot, soapy water is forced through the garments by air pressure and then drawn back again by suction, removing every last particle of dirt. No rubbing, dragging or tearing. Sixty times a minute this happens, the vacuum cups taking a forward position with each down stroke. Operates without vibration. Wringer starts, reverses and swings to any position, instantly. Gas heater heats water to any desired temperature.

Let us demonstrate the "EASY" in your own home and prove it does even more than we say.

DON'T FORGET THE DEMONSTRATION AT our store all day Saturday. We will explain everything about the "EASY" and meet every argument for or against it. We invite everyone to come in and see this wonderful Washing Machine for it will talk for itself. Phone 6196 for a demonstration to do your next week's washing.

MORRAL QUEEN ESTHER CIRCLE IS ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Harold Morral is Hostess.
Moral Notes.

Morral, O., March 17. (Special.)—The Queen Esther circle of the Methodist church held a well-attended meeting at the home of Mrs. Harold Morral, west of town, Friday night. Mrs. O. G. Morral gave a reading, "Rose Gregory Observes Holy Week." The church and community was the subject of a reading given by Miss Helen Van Orsdall. A series of readings on the "Hardwood School" was given by nine members. A reading was then given by Miss Grace Barton, "Mountain Peaks in Training." This was followed by readings by Miss Jessie Maske, "On the Mexican Border," and "They Shall Walk in White," by Mrs. Harold Morral. At a short business session one new member was received into the circle. Jesse Maske was elected assistant secretary, and Gertrude Mahaffey, assistant treasurer.

Morral Temple, No. 423 Pythian Sisters, held a well-attended meeting at the Knights of Pythias hall Friday night. Three candidates were initiated into the order.

Mrs. Martha Grim and Mrs. H. S. Mahaffey returned from Chicago Monday, where they were called by the death of Mrs. Grim's sister, Miss Mary Cox. The funeral was held Monday.

Dr. Bruce Kinney, secretary of Home Missions of the Baptist church, west of the Mississippi river, a former missionary among the Indians, delivered a splendid sermon at the Baptist church Sunday morning. Out of his large experiences as a missionary and secretary, he brought a splendid message on "The Power of the Gospel to Save to the Uttermost."

Rev. R. E. Brown will begin a series of special meetings at the Baptist church Sunday evening.

Professor Crawford, a returned foreign missionary from Burma visited the Baptist minister, Rev. R. E. Brown Tuesday, and delivered a lecture on his work at the Baptist church at Wyandot, Tuesday night.

W. W. and S. E. Morral received word Thursday morning of the death of their uncle, John Harmon, of Nevada. Mr. Harmon died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ida Slagle, at Inuyrus, where he was visiting. The funeral will be held at Nevada Saturday.

An all-day meeting of the Missionary Aid society of the Baptist church was held at the home of Mrs. S. M. McIntire, Wednesday. The day was passed sewing for the Easter bazaar. A picnic dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour.

The men's class of the Methodist Sunday-school met at the home of W. W. Morral Monday night. After the usual devotions, a short business session was held.
